Integrated Assessment:

As assessment practices must be open, transparent, fair, valid and reliable as well as ensuring that no learner is disadvantaged in any way whatsoever, an integrated assessment approach is incorporated into the qualification. Learning, teaching and assessment are inextricably linked. Whenever possible, the assessment of knowledge, skills and attitudes and values shown in the unit standards should be integrated.

A variety of methods must be used in assessment and tools and activities must be appropriate to the context in which the learner is working. Where it is not possible to assess the learner in the workplace or on-the-job, simulations, case studies, role plays and other similar techniques should be used to provide a context appropriate to the assessment.

The term 'Integrated Assessment' implies that theoretical and practical components should be assessed together. During Integrated Assessments the assessor should make use of Formative and Summative Assessment methods and assess combinations of practical, applied, foundational and reflective competencies.

Assessors should assess and give credit for the evidence of learning that has already been acquired through formal, informal and non-formal learning and work experience. Assessment should ensure that all Specific Outcomes, Essential Embedded Knowledge and Critical Cross-Field Outcomes are assessed. The assessment of Critical Cross-Field outcomes should be integrated with the assessment of the Specific Outcomes and Essential Embedded Knowledge.

INTERNATIONAL COMPARABILITY

Best Practice:

The Military and Special Forces of the following countries were identified as applying best practice in the training of Special Force operators:

- Australia: Special Air Service.
- Belgium: Para Commandos.
- Brazil: The Gruemec.
- Germany: The Kommando Spezialkrafte.
- India: The Para Commandos.
- Israel: The Sayeret Matkal.
- France: The French Foreign Legion and Commando Hubert.
- Jordan: The Royal Special Forces.
- Netherlands: The Korps Kommandotroepen.
- Oman: The Sultans Special Forces.
- Portugal: The Grupo de Operacoes Especiais and the Army Commandos.
- Russia: Spetnaz.
- United Kingdom: Special Air Service and Special Boat Squadron.
- United States of America: Delta Force, Navy Sea, Air and Land (SEALS) and the Marine Reconnaissance Battalions.

The police or para-military forces of the following countries were identified as implementing best practice in the training of their operators:

- France: GIGN and RAID.

- Germany: GSG9.
- Jordan: SOU17.
- Malaysia: The Pasukan Gerakan Khas PDRM.
- United States of America: Special Weapons and Tactics Teams.

The comparison was only conducted on the initial training conducted by the various countries. Due to the sensitive nature of these forces and the operations that they participate in, the finer detail regarding their training, tactics and techniques are not readily available or open for public viewing. The information given in this comparison respects that confidentiality.

One would generally find that after the initial training operators specialise in specific environments such as land, sea or air operations. This is also the context in which the National Certificate: Special Combat Capabilities, Level 5 was generated. None of the above-mentioned countries have formal qualifications for any of the related training.

Findings:

It was found that the content of all special forces training is similar. The environment, tactics, equipment and techniques used do, however, vary between countries and organisations within a country. In terms of the military Special Forces the following training was found to be common throughout:

- General Fitness and Perseverance.
- Self Defence Techniques.
- Multilingualism.
- Basic Medical Emergency Skills.
- Navigation (conventional/electronic).
- Sharp shooting rifle and pistol.
- Survival techniques.
- Obstacle crossing and target penetration.
- Night operation capability.
- Basic demolition techniques.
- Mine awareness.
- Improvisation techniques.
- Establish/maintain communications.
- Still and video photography.

- Camouflage, conceal and deception.
- Reconnaissance and surveillance.
- Parachuting.
- Small boat handling in closed waters.
- Foot movement rural and urban.
- Vehicle movement rural and urban.
- Combat drills rural and urban.
- Escape and evasion.

In terms of police or para-military forces, the following was found to be common throughout the various countries:

- General Fitness and Perseverance.
- Self Defence Techniques.
- Sharp shooting rifle and pistol.
- Obstacle crossing.
- Target penetration.
- Night operation capability.

- Basic demolition techniques.
- Improvisation techniques.
- Establish/maintain communications.
- Surveillance.
- Camouflage, conceal and deception.
- Vehicle and foot movement in rural and urban areas.
- Combat drills.

Conclusion:

It has been found that the National Certificate: Special Combat Capabilities, Level 5 compares very favourably with established international special forces training in that the content and approaches to training are very similar.
