Notice of the implementation date for individual geographic number portability

The Independent Communications Authority of South Africa (ICASA) hereby gives notice of 26 April 2010 as the implementation date of individual geographic number portability.

Geographic Number Portability (also known as Fixed Number Portability) – is the ability for fixed-line customers to switch from one fixed-line operator to another without losing their fixed-line numbers.

The three consecutive beeps of not more than two seconds will serve as a notification method to customers that the geographic number dialed has been ported.
