As part of Long Term Ecological Research (LTER), SAEON makes use of Acoustic Doppler Current Profilers (ADCP's) to measure ocean current velocities and vectors throughout the water column. ADCP moorings are anchored to sacrificial anchors at between 30 m and 100 m depth on the seafloor and buoyed up vertically by four 14 inch subsurface non-compressible floats which give a total of 68 kg of lift. Retrieval of the mooring is achieved by interrogating the acoustic release unit which is attached just above the anchor. This interrogation activates the mechanical release arm which then breaks the attachment point at the anchors and the mooring is brought to the surface by the subsurface floats. The bid documents can be downloaded from the NRF website: www.nrf.ac.za Select BIDS and then CALL FOR BIDS.	Pretoria	NRF/SAEON/MAR/01/2014	2014-08-22	665	665
